BY JOHN D. ABOTON.

S'eep gentle girl, sweetly s'eep, Thy dream of life is o'er; The tear that sorrow le de thee weep, S'all dim thins eye no more.

Thou wert a flower of fairest hue, Which morning sun uncl-s'd; Fresh on the drops of early dew. That glitter on the rose.

But now, alas! the bitter frest Of death, has nipp't thy bloom; The flower bas felt a chilling blast, And withers in the 1 mb.

But now the smile of early years, That made thee known to all; Is remembered but with bitter tears, And sorrow for thine early fall.

Sleep gentic girl, sweetly sleep, Thy dream of life is o'er; The tear that serrow bade thee weep, Shall dira thine eye no more. St. Mar, 's College, Sept. 18, 1853.
